

The Tölö area is a nice residential district, just behind the Parliament House and the National Museum, and just stone's throw away from the city centre. All the major amenities, including shops, cafés, restaurants and cinemas are within walking distance. The Tölö area has one of the nicest parks in the city with seabay and picturesque old villas. Helsinki, the capital of Finland, is the cultural, financial and economic centre of the country. The greater Helsinki area has some 1,5 million inhabitants, and, with some of the newest trends from the world, the city is becoming a true international world city. Currently one of the world leaders in technology and the home of Nokia, there has never been a better time to do business in Finland.
